Talking smack, and a Cardinal in a casket

It was probably just the calm before Saturday's storm.

A quick drive through Lawrenceburg earlier this week saw little that would make anyone think Armageddon is at hand.

There was one house with one of those "House Divided" flags out front and quite a few cars with "UK" magnets or bumper stickers. But little else.

But trust me. Anderson County, like the rest of Kentucky is worked up about the latest chapter in Kentucky vs. Louisville. With Saturday's game being in the Final Four, there is more than just pride on the line.

"I'm pumped for Saturday!" says Lawrenceburg resident Angie Rhodes, a mega-Wildcat fan.

But saying basketball fans are pumped is kind of like saying the sun comes up in the east. Or like saying Anderson County is Big Blue Country.

Downtown, at Jim's Pool Room, everything is blue. It's almost wall-to-wall Wildcat, including that now-famous poster of Anthony Davis, a UK corn hole set, a photo of owner Jim Hyatt and Wayne Turner and even a print of the 1975 Wildcats that included Anderson County's own Jimmy

Alleged fake pot peddler enters not guilty plea

Buyer claims Vaughn sold him
$2,000 worth of bath salts

From staff reports

Craig Vaughn, the owner of Herbal Awakenings who spoke out openly against Anderson County's fake pot ban, pleaded not guilty to two misdemeanors at his arraignment in Anderson County District Court on March 22.

Police arrested the 30-year-old Vaughn on Feb. 17 for one count of drug paraphernalia — deliver/manufacture and one count for "any misdemeanor not covered by the codes."

Vaughn will be back in District Court on April 11 for a pre-trial conference.

As of March 26, Vaughn is the first and currently only business owner in Anderson County to be charged according to the fiscal court's fake pot and bath salts ban.

Vaughn

According to the city police's search warrant, Officer Josh Satterly received a recorded and written complaint from an identified subject who purchased bath salts known as "White Tiger" or "Spell Casting" on Feb. 16 from Vaughn's store.

The subject stated he had purchased bath salts from the Herbal Awakenings store, located at 1501 Daniel Drive, approximately 10 times during the week of Feb. 13, Household trash is strewn into the ravine along Wildcat Road, just outside of Tyrone. Residents there say they are tired of people dumping trash along the gravel portion of the road, and are following suspected dumpers in an effort to catch them.

Tyrone is a friendly little community along the Kentucky River where neighbors watch out for each other.

But that's not all residents are watching.

They're also keeping an eye out for interlopers passing through with truckloads of garbage and debris that will likely end up dumped just up the road from their homes.

"The people of Tyrone are watching," warned Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway. "I know there are some who are following trucks they don't recognized up Wildcat to try to catch them dumping, and others at the other end are watching, too."

Tyrone resident Johnny Beasley said he is one of those keeping an eye out for dumpers.

"If I see someone heading that way, I'll follow them," Beasley said Monday morning while taking a break from yard work. "Others are

Health board OKs massive payroll cuts

Move will help balance health department's budget

By Ben Carlson

Employees will soon be paying for the controversial new health department building out of their own paychecks.

The Anderson County Board of Health unanimously approved a massive payroll decrease last Tuesday night as the final step of solving the fiscal crisis caused in part by the new $2 million building.

The decision will chop roughly $155,000 from the department's payroll through a series of furlough days and dropping positions from full- to part-time.

The decision takes affect July 1, the first day of the health department's new fiscal year.

The $155,000, coupled with another $35,000 in program, utility and other savings, should be enough to balance the department's budget, which has run a $180,000-plus deficit each of the past two years.

The deficit was largely attributed to the new building, which was approved in 2008 but opened last spring. Payments on the build-

Dan Conner, the team captain.

There is a little bit of Louisville in a photo of Rick Pitino - "That was when he was at UK," laughed Hyatt - and one of a Cardinal lying in a casket.

Needless to say, nearly all of Hyatt's patrons bleed blue. "There is one (Cardinal fan) that comes in here," Hyatt smiled.

But most are like Charlie Bryant, decked out in a blue jacket and wearing a UK cap. He says Anderson County has "maybe two" Louisville fans and they will see their team go down on Saturday.

I asked Bryant what Saturday's margin would be. He held up 10 fingers.

But even though Anderson County is heavily blue, there is a twinge of red blood running around.

"I have done some special graduate studies from U of L. I am a regular season ticket holder for basketball and football. I attend the games regularly," says Chuck Fletcher, the former transportation director for the Anderson County Board of Education.

Fletcher believes the Cardinals will continue to shock the world and knock the Wildcats out of their presumed national championship. "I am picking Louisville to win even though it will be a tough game to win," he says. "I am proud that Louisville played well in the Big East Championship Tournament through the NCAA Tournament."

Which is almost how many Wildcat fans feel about Saturday. The oddsmakers agree, installing UK as a 9.5-point favorite, the largest spread of any Final Four game since 1999.

"Oh, they will win because they're the better team, hands down," Rhodes says.

Vicki Peavler, who will be attending her second consecutive Final Four, agrees, "UK has taken this whole season one game at a time, and they play as a team. Everyone is contributing. They pick each other up."

It might be the most impressive trait the Wildcats have. Makenzie Cann, a star guard on the Anderson County High School girls' basketball team, saw that when she and her family traveled to Atlanta for the South Region tournament. And she has no doubt that Wildcat fans will be happy about 8:30 Saturday night.

"Duh! UK is gonna win! Louisville has to guard every position including people off the bench. If one of UK's normally top performers has a bad game they still win. At one point in the Baylor game (Terrence) Jones had 3 (points) and (Doron) Lamb had 0 and they were up by 20."

But Austin Linzy, who plays on the boys' basketball team at the school sees it differently. "UK is by far the most talented team in the nation, but sometimes they don't play like they should," he said. "You also have to understand that UL is playing their best all year and playing with tons of confidence. I think it's going to be a close game and I feel that UL will take it home not because they're better, but because I feel they will want it way more than UK will."

That's how it will be the rest of the week: A giant smack-talk smack-down.

Like at least 118 of Kentucky's 120 counties, Anderson is heavily Blue. But there is enough Red to make things interesting. Just like Saturday's showdown promises to be.

ing are about $120,000 each year.

Eight health department staffers will be reduced from 37.5 hours each week to 34.5, meaning they will lose just over one month's pay during the next fiscal year.

One nurse will have her hours cut from full time (37.5 hours) to 25 hours each week, as will a member of the department's support staff.

Interim director Tim Wright, who also serves as the department's environmental director, will also lose three hours of pay each week, according to health board chairman Harold Todd.

Todd added that the vacant director's position, left open when former director Brandon Hurley quit earlier this year, brings the overall savings to roughly $155,000.

Unaffected by the decision are the department's five school nurses, who had proposed reductions in their hours offset by a unanimous decision of the Anderson County Board of Education to contribute more funds toward their pay.

Todd said he understands the impact the furlough days and reduction in hours will have on the department's employees.

"Three hours a week is a big lick," Todd said. "But it had to be done, it really did."

Todd credited the health board's finance committee, which met a half-dozen times over the past several months to figure its way out of the large budget deficit.

"They really did a tremendous job," he said.

"At least the community can now see that we are trying to balance the budget, cut costs and look at savings, all try to do it all without raising taxes."

Board member Dr. Mark Tussey echoed Todd's thoughts.

"I was very pleased to move that the Anderson County Board of Health accept the new health department budget because it keeps the health department services intact and available to Anderson County citizens, moves the health department onto more solid ground financially and prevents any health department employees from being laid off," Tussey said.

"I believe Chairman Harold Todd deserves a great deal of credit for helping formulate this budget."

Brothers arrested, charged with car break-ins

Suspects face eight felony charges for stolen property

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

Justin Thornberry, 23, and his brother Jason Thornberry, 20, of 139 Ballard St., have been charged with eight counts each for more than 100 car break-ins in Anderson County over the last three months. Both Thornberry brothers were arrested March 14 and each charged with three counts of alleged theft by unlawful taking, distribution of firearms; one count of theft of uncontrolled substance; and four counts of fraudulent use of credit card after reported lost/stolen for under $500. Police previously reported that each brother would be charged with 80-100 counts of theft by unlawful taking and/or criminal trespassing. City Officer Jeremy Cornish, who has been supervising the investigation, said he would be charging both Thornberry brothers with the eight initial felonies, and after he completes and compiles a list of affected victims and total restitution, additional misdemeanor charges may be added once the case goes before circuit court. After issuing the search warrant of the brothers' residence on March 7, Cornish said he found more than 30 car keys with garage door openers on the key fobs in the suspects' residence. Other stolen property included cartons of cigarettes, a 24-pack of Mountain Dew, iPods, loose change, four firearms, jewelry, narcotic medication, car stereo speakers, car amps, purses and more. According to police reports, Cornish also observed the brothers using the stolen credit cards at the Dollar Store, 62 Express, the ATM machine at Murphy Gas Station and at the Puff N Stuff store. Cornish took both male subjects to the police department for an interview, where they confessed to the break-ins. Both men stated to police that they would split the money and items obtained 50/50, and told police that they both have drug addictions. Cornish said he was able to identify the suspects due to the manner in which they selected vehicles.

"They would empty out all of the vehicles, leave it a wreck," Cornish said. "Take all the firearms." There has been no physical damage reported for any vehicles that the two brothers burglarized, Cornish said, because all vehicles they targeted were unlocked. "Every vehicle was unlocked," he said. "They would come to a locked vehicle and bypass the locked vehicle to get to the unlocked one. And that could be a message to the Anderson County public: lock your doors."

Horseman receives Impact Award

burg was honored March 20 by the Bluegrass Alliance for Women for her efforts to improve the economic status of women and girls in Anderson County, according to a news release. Impact Awards were presented at BAW's annual award luncheon to 11 women representing counties in the Bluegrass Area Development District. Horseman was recognized for her work in "guiding the Girl Scout troops in financial literacy education through the Girl Scout cookie sale." BAW started presenting Impact Awards in 2007 to recognize women whose professional and/or community activities are furthering the mission of the Bluegrass Alliance for Women, which is to improve the lives of women and girls. Horseman is a loan officer at Farmers Bank in Lawrenceburg and has been active in Girl Scouts for the past 14 years. Currently, she is an assistant leader in a multi-level age troop, the public relations chair and the Girl Scout cookie pantry manager for Anderson, Boyle, Mercer and Woodford counties. "Barbara Horseman is one of the best volunteers that the Council has," said Susan Miller and Samantha Walker, who nominated her. Another project Horseman has been involved in is helping Girl Scouts in Anderson County organize a special Back Pack Service Project at the start of each school year. Last year 800 backpacks were donated and filled with school supplies.

watching, too, and I heard they about caught someone [Sunday]." People dumping everything from household trash and furniture to yard debris is nothing new along the gravel stretch of Wildcat Road, a steep, curvy area that hugs the side of a deep ravine that connects Tyrone to Stringtown. But the problem came to a head about a month ago when a fresh supply of trash, including a hot tub, showed up, angering Magistrate David Ruggles. Ruggles brought up the issue during last Tuesday night's meeting of the Anderson County Fiscal Court, saying that something needs to be done, including discussing closing that section of the road. "I've never been in favor of closing the road, but it's so bad now I thought, by golly, let's talk about it." Conway said he has heard from residents since the idea of closing the road surfaced in The Anderson News, and that most don't want it closed.

Clean-up volunteers needed

Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway is calling for volunteers to help clean up the ravine off the gravel portion of Wildcat Road. Dates have not been set, but he expects the effort to take a couple of days. Because the area is steep, he said one idea is to have tow trucks lower cables into the ravine and drag items back to the road. Another idea is to put bring a front-end loader in from where the creek empties out, and use it to remove larger items. He said the county will provide equipment; he just needs volunteers to make it work. "We just want to clean this up and move forward," Conway said. To volunteer, call Conway's office at 839-3471.

—from staff reports

Conway

"They lived in that when they were first married, and their first child died there," he said. "If someone is caught, they ought to be locked up and fined." Conway said he suspects most of the illegal dumping is coming from Woodford County. He said residents there pay 4 cents per pound to get rid of unwanted items. Here, residents can get rid of nearly anything but household trash for free by dumping items into a compactor near the county highway facility. Previously, Conway said those running the compactor either neglected or didn't bother to ensure those dumping were Anderson County residents, and Woodford County residents took advantage of the free service. Now that IDs are being checked, Conway said those who used to dump here for free are being turned away and some are heading to Wildcat Road. "I've been out there many times and seen trucks with Woodford County plates," he said.

Board of health just keeps getting better

Column as I see 'em ...

Let's start this week's column off with some good news for a change, OK?

One of former health director Brandon Hurley's biggest supporters on the Anderson County Board of Health is no longer there, I'm happy to report.

Joy Hoskins, a nurse who works for the state health department, was not reappointed.

That's a fact. Of course that wasn't supposed to be known, so the official word from people in Frankfort who ultimately dodged my questions is that she "resigned."

Here's how it went down. Last week, a list was generated at the state level saying who was appointed and reappointed to the Anderson County Board of Health. Hoskins wasn't reappointed, and an email I obtained from the judge-executive's office via an open records request said just that: not reappointed. For emphasis, the word not was underlined.

Being that she is one of the elites in Frankfort, that looked rather shoddy so by the time Tuesday night's health board meeting rolled around, she had offered her letter of resignation.

Not that an effort wasn't made otherwise. After word spread that she wasn't reappointed, her boss, Dr. Steve Davis, said a mistake was made and that her term was supposed to run through the rest of the current fiscal year.

Fortunately, an effort to replace her here had already begun, so Davis was left with no choice but to ask Hoskins to resign.

Not that she'll be missed. Her swings and misses over the past four years proved very costly to taxpayers, not to mention the health department employees who by July will be paying for the new building with cuts from their own paychecks.

Ben Carlson
Publisher

Strike one

Although she wasn't on the board at the time, her first swing and miss came with her support to hire Hurley, an inexperienced person whose own performance proved he was elevated to director far too soon. She supported him in lieu of current interim director Tim Wright, a veteran of the department who was more than qualified to be director at that time, and has already proven so in just a couple of months on the job.

Strike two

Her second miss was recommending the new health building — she was on the new building committee — which proved to be a $2 million debacle that ran the health department to the brink of insolvency.

Strike three

Then, despite all of the ongoing problems, she refused to waver in her support of Hurley, who was allowed to quit but should have been fired last year. Like the first line of my columns always say, I "column like I see 'em," Nurse Hoskins, and you're out.

Speaking of debacles, pardon me while I continue to beat Hurley's dead horse.

I chronicled in last week's column some of Hurley's financial foul-ups, and have learned yet another.

Not only weren't the heating and air systems at the new health department building not properly programmed, they also aren't under a normal manufacturer's warranty.

Someone I trust said that's because Hurley tried to get cute and instead of utilizing a heating and air company to buy and install those units, he purchased them outright to avoid paying sales tax, which a government agency wouldn't have had to pay, anyway.

Which explains why they weren't properly programmed.

Hurley then compounded that problem by not ensuring proper warranty information was filed, leaving the system with only a year instead of multiple years.

Bottom line: Hurley had way too much autonomy, and those who at that time should have been looking over his shoulder simply didn't do it.

If one of those units fails, don't look for them — and they know who they are — to step in and pay for the repairs.

Just as it's been proven that Hurley wasn't particularly concerned about safeguarding our tax dollars, the same can be said for those who kept him in that job.

Speaking of that new building, only one board member who voted in favor of it remains, Dr. Andrew Bustin, who served as chairman at that time (and, ostensibly, the person charged with overseeing Hurley).

Two other board members, Dr. Mark Tussey and Keith Klink, were also on the board then, but each voted against the building.

Some simply served out their terms and walked away; others abandoned ship rather than face the heat from their decisions.

Either way, there's no question that the current health board is much more keenly aware of what the public expects and actually cares about using your tax dollars wisely.

They are: Dr. Bustin, Dr. Mark Tussey, Dr. Jaime Cooper, Don Wells, Klink, Todd and Judge-Executive John Wayne Conway, and new members Steve Carmichael and Mark Litkenhus.

The things we still carry

I wonder what I'll carry when I die.

Probably my cell phone.

Obviously, regrets. Maybe a pen or two.

Trayvon Martin, 17, was carrying Skittles and a bottle of iced tea.

And now, the weight of a country more divided on race than we'd like to think.

In the last few weeks, Martin's tragic death incited anger against many — the NRA, racism, gun laws, government, police and vigilantes — with few answers to pacify the outrage.

The facts are these: Martin, a black teenager from Florida, was walking to a relative's house one night from a convenience store when neighborhood watch captain George

Meaghan Downs
Staff columnist

Zimmerman fatally shot him.

The rest of the story is unclear.

Was the shooting a hate crime?

Was Zimmerman acting in self-defense, as he claims?

Are the accusations against Zimmerman's reported actions valid or fair?

What we do know is that the death of Trayvon Martin isn't simple, or easily digestible.

In 2012, we don't like to be reminded that it's as simple as a teenager's death for issues about race to bubble to the surface.

We'd like to think we're more evolved than that.

But we're not.

If current affairs and our nation's history have taught us anything, it's that tragedy unites as well as divides.

Angry over lights, road to Mickey D's

To the editor:

Is anyone else getting tired of the red light at Main and Woodford?

Why is it they put a turn light on Woodford Street and not one for Main Street?

There is so much trouble turning from Main Street to Woodford Street, unless you get lucky and can miss a car and do a quick turn.

The same issue exists at US 127 Bypass and Glensboro Road. Why is there not a turn light there, either?

Oh, and another thing. When is someone going to take responsibility for the road into the new McDonald's?

I have called the city and they are not responsible; called the county and they aren't responsible; called state and they are not responsible. The street has a name — would it not be considered a city or county road?

Someone needs to step up and take care of this road. I nearly have my drink and breakfast all of my car and myself every morning.

Doesn't anyone else have these problems?

Go ahead, close Wildcat Road

To the editor:

While raising funds for my kids' team, I've had the opportunity to see the best that Anderson County has to offer, as well as some of the worst.

As part of a grant secured by the county, we participated in 11 miles of road clean up. This was a great opportunity for us to give back to the community and earn much-needed funds in the process.

We were fortunate enough to receive what I believe to be two of the most scenic roads in Anderson County. We cleaned a 4.3-mile stretch on Gilbert's Creek Road. Wow! What a naturally beautiful area.

And it's clearly an area that residents take pride in because, once we got past the first mile or so, there was limited trash to clean up.

Beautiful streams led straight to the Kentucky River and we spent several hours on a beautiful day cleaning up and enjoying the scenery.

Another, equally beautiful road that we cleaned up was Wildcat Road. The paved portion of the road was well maintained for the most part; residents obviously take pride there as well. However, the gravel portion of the road brought tears to my eyes.

We cleaned it up shortly after it had rained and there were waterfalls coming through the natural rock gardens, spilling their water over the moss and into the creek.

Early spring blossoms were peaking their way through the moist soil and our first butterfly of the season was seen gliding through the forest.

The photos only hint at the beauty of the area. But, there are numerous scars in the landscape.

The articles in the paper have highlighted the large couches and hot tubs and such, carelessly thrown over the edge.

That is disturbing. But, what hurts me even more are the bags, upon bags, upon bags, of personal trash thrown over the cliff, aimed at the creek.

Not all the bags reached their destinations and hang perilously in trees, along the cliff, and just a few remained at the top.

We cleaned what we could at the top — bags full of dirty diapers and regular household trash.

This trash was aimed at the creek that leads directly to the Kentucky River, where my drinking water comes from.

And yours.

And the water of the family who is dumping their dirty diapers and other trash into it.

Try as I might, I can't get into the mind that thinks this is OK. Perhaps it's an attempt at saving money? Maybe they can't afford trash service? I don't know. I wish I did, because that would help in coming up with a solution to this problem that affects us all.

I would definitely support closing that section of the road to automobile traffic, except in the case of flooding where officers could open it back up to vehicle traffic.

I do think it's an area that is a real treasure for our county and one that invites afternoon strolls on beautiful days ... or it will, once we figure out how to clean it up and keep and prevent it from getting trashed again.

Why is library restricting toll-free calls?

To the editor:

Egads! Now I cannot even make a toll free phone call from the Anderson Public Library.

I can't call to look for a job in Frankfort, Harrodsburg or Versailles, now not even toll free calls.

Someone please tell me why I pay taxes for this public facility? Where is all the money being spent? It is not in giving me a job when they were hiring.

There's no work in Lawrenceburg, and that's as far as local phone goes; this is a scam worthy of its own post.

Thou shalt not steal, and all of that religious BS. Maybe not so BS after all. What do say you taxpayers?

I vote!

Also, all the pay phones are disappearing.

Band of Brothers serves community well

To the editor:

At a recent boys' and girls' basketball game, the Band of Brothers Community Service Organization, along with Morgan Norton, Allie Rogers, Brittany House, Haley Elder, Lauren Fowler and Abby Pike, collected donations for our local food pantry.

The Band of Brothers is a group of senior football players who have determined they would like to serve their community.

Serve they did.

With the help of the beautiful young ladies, they collected at the gate, concessions area and throughout the crowd during both ball games.

The crowd responded wonderfully, and the group collected $577.29.

On behalf of the board of directors of the Lamp and Light Ministries, Open Hands Community Food Pantry, I would like to thank this wonderful group of young people from our community.

Their parents, coaches, churches, school and community can be very proud of their efforts to serve others.

Their example should be an inspiration to all. May God bless each and every one of them.

Early warmth sure to spawn plenty of pests

As I write, Mother Nature is watering my garden. Listening to the patter of rain on the skylight is always peaceful. I think I can almost hear the couch and a book calling my name, but spring has sprung. There's work to do, even in the rain.

My peach and pear trees are enjoying their first blooming on the farm. The strawberries are starting to flower and so are my beautiful blue phlox.

My asters are budding out, too.

Dogwoods and redbuds are decorating the hillsides and highways.

The early onset of summer temperatures has speeded up all things growing and all things flying.

I listened to a great radio program with a biologist, botanist and meteorologist the other day. Of course, they were talking about the warm winter and what effects it is having on this good earth. They all had ideas about the whys, climate change, the Arctic Oscillation, La

Nina and El Nino, but no one really knew.

I've always been a why kind of girl, but at this point, I think we ought to be concerned more with the what. What effects can we expect?

The experts thought that we have to be concerned with a possible cold snap in April or May. The timing of such a drop could affect plant pollination and the setting of fruit.

The unseasonably warm winter and early spring also allowed some bugs to make it through in record numbers. So, they concluded, we should be prepared for a lot of swatting this summer.

There are a few things that we can do to make working and sitting outside more pleasant.

If you have rain barrels or other water collectors outside, pour a little vegetable oil on top. The oil will cover the top of the water and block mosquitoes from breeding there.

Citronella candles or the ever popular tiki torches will help keep the little buzzers from bothering you while sitting outside.

To keep chiggers and mosquitoes from feasting on you, spray down with strong chamomile tea (four bags to 2 cups of water). To keep crawling and flying freeloaders from feasting on your plants, prepare your arsenal.

I don't use store-bought pesticides. I make my own smelly onion and garlic spray to keep insects from eating the green. Cut up two onions and several cloves of garlic and place in a gallon jug. Fill it with water and set it in the sun for several hours to ferment. Strain out the pieces, add a teaspoon of vegetable oil, then pour into a spray bottle.

Bad bugs, turtles, birds and rabbits that like to belly up to my bountiful buffet do not like my baby powder dustings (I use it like Seven Dust), or my liberal use of ground hot pepper on the soil.

In my opinion, I've got lots of other "food" on the farm and they can darn well eat that instead.

Now, I'm off to do a little fencing. Bambi and his friends will be sniffing around soon, and nothing beats an effective fence to keep them out.

The dogs have to sleep sometime.

Happy growing.

Thoughts on preserving the fruits (and veggies) of your labor

I'm thinking about canning, pickling and jams, and I haven't even planted the first seed.

I'm hoping for good production from my garden. I don't want to put all the work into it and just get enough to eat fresh.

We have a wonderful publication on Home Vegetable Gardening in Kentucky ID-128. You can search it on-line or you can pick up a free copy at the Anderson County Extension Office.

Limited supplies of the publication are available.

Why do people grow gardens and then preserve the food? How much should you grow? How much will it cost? If you already have jars, a pressure canner, a water bath canner and other necessary equipment, then your cost will be lower.

The first year is always the most expensive when gathering equipment for gardening and canning.

The number one reason Americans preserve food is because they've grown it and don't want to waste it. They like the way the home-produced food tastes.

Some people want to know that there are no preservatives, pesticides or allergens in their home canned food. Some people have a family tradition of food preservation and want to pass it along to future generations.

Food preservation is a family activity for some families. It's very labor intensive. It builds teamwork in families and teaches responsibility to all who participate.

Even young children can help snap beans, wash vegetables and do other jobs.

If you figure the cost of home canning, you have to decide if you want to place a monetary value on your labor. If you do consider your labor and use an average wage, then the cost of canning food at home will be about the same as buying the food at the grocery for a medium priced item.

Historically, the cost comparison suggests that over a period of 10 years, you probably will save money by growing and canning your own food. If you try it for a couple of years and stop, then you probably lost money. Only you can make the decision if home canning is worth the effort.

I will be teaching a four part series on food preservation beginning in April. There is enough money in the budget to do the class for free this year, maybe even repeating the workshops if there is enough demand. The class will be hands on, so you will actually be canning.

I recommend that you register for the entire series especially if you have never canned. The first lesson on canning meat, game, fish and poultry will have the most extensive lesson on how to use a pressure canner and the basics of canning. Some of it will be repeated in the other classes but will not be as in-depth.

Call the Anderson County Extension Office at 839-7271 to register for the class. You may register for individual classes but preference will be given to people who want to attend the complete series.

All supplies and a Ball Blue Book will be provided, one for each household registered. Dial pressure gauges will be tested the day before each class.

I'm sponsoring a contest for the oldest usable canner. I'm not sure what the prize will be but it might be something pretty nice. So check your cupboards and start bringing in those old canners.

They will be returned after the winner is determined. The deadline is April 25. Class dates and topics are listed below.

All classes are on Wednesday nights from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

April 25 - Canning meat, poultry and fish; freezing and dehydrating

May 23 - Canning vegetables, tomatoes, salsa and other tomato products

June 6 - Jams and jellies

June 20 - Canning fruit and pickling

Owner searching for missing dog

To the editor:

The owner of the missing English mastiff is desperately pleading for the help of Anderson County residents.

Tasia is not used to running loose in the county and she may be acting afraid and difficult to catch.

If you see Tasia, she is probably very hungry and could probably be trapped with food in an enclosed area.

We are very hopeful that she stays out of the traffic but firmly believe that she is trying to make her way back into town, where she calls home on Court Street.

When she was last seen, she was still wearing her thick pink collar with a large portion of her pink leash still attached. Her name and address are on her collar, in case you are able to get close enough to her. If you find her, please

Bagdad days to celebrate heroes

To the editor:

I am writing to inform the public of a community event that will honor Kentucky's military heroes.

On May 12, Bagdad Days, a community event sponsored by Bagdad Baptist Church, will be celebrating 20 years. As part of this celebration, the community will pay special honor to those Kentucky individuals who have served in military combat for our country.

The Bagdad Days parade at 10 a.m. will showcase all active and veteran military personnel from World War II, Cold War, Korean War, Vietnam War, Iran-Iraq War, Gulf War and War on Terror.

We invite all Kentucky past and present combat military individuals to this event to be recognized as a hero.

If you are interested in being a part of the Bagdad Days parade, please contact me at 502-633-9444.

In addition to the military recognition several other activities are planned, including a community quilt show starting at 9 a.m.

If you have a personal quilt or quilt made by a deceased relative with connection to the Bagdad community and would like to display it, please contact Kathy Marion at 502-220-3999.

We look forward to celebrating 20 years of Bagdad Days with the community.

rial, there are wolves howling protests just beyond the light.

For every opinion and reaction, there's an opposite and equal verbal call to arms.

We cannot change what occurred.

But those on both sides of the fence can change how we talk about tragedy to move beyond the chasm it creates.

I question whether or not it's fair that Trayvon has become such an emblem. The tragedy of his death has become a jumping off point for other's soapboxes, as opposed to encouraging some sort of middle ground when it comes to conversations about race.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson seems to think that's fair.

Jackson spoke to a church audience on Sunday, stating that "martyrs have power," and that Trayvon "represents all of us."

But Trayvon Martin didn't ask to carry the responsibility of martyrdom.

Now he carries the rallying cry of those who want justice, who light candles for every question that still goes unanswered.

The things Martin carried in his final hours of life have now become symbols of a community's confusion and hurt.

He's become the poster child for indignation and revenge, a photocopied face on waving protest signs, his personal history up for dissection and debate.

I wouldn't want to carry that burden. Not in life, and certainly not in death.

LAWRENCEBURG CITY COUNCIL

Lower speeds for Main and Woodford?

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

City Council member Larry Giles requested last week that a letter be drafted to the Department of Transportation in an effort to reduce Main Street and Glensboro Road's speed limits from 45 to 35 mph.

"What we're doing in effect is cutting speeds to 35," Giles said. The request is to reduce the speed limit from Mack Drive to Carlton Drive in both directions and from the Walmart intersection of Highway 44/Glensboro Road to about Saffell Street.

According to city clerk Robbie Hume, both roads are classified as state highways, and District 7 will determine whether or not to honor the council's request.

"It says 45, but no one's gonna drive it," Evans said. "If we can do something to deter a wreck, let's do it."

Bonds refinanced

The city council voted 5-0 to refinance and combine two bonds for a total bond debt of about $14 million, a measure that is anticipated to save the city $3 million and reduce its water and sewer parity rating.

Council member Tommy Vaughn was the only council member absent from the March 12 meeting.

According to a representative from the Kentucky League of Cities, who recommended the refinancing, combining the city's 2003 series bonds and the 1991 USDA loan for the sewer plant would save the city about $3 million over the 20-year life of the bond.

"By issuing new bonds, the city could save a lot of money over the long term," KLC representative Garrett Drakeford said.

This refinancing, however, would require the city to contribute more principal outlay in paying off its bond debt service for the first 10 years of the new bond. Council member Steve Rucker questioned whether the council's budget was strong enough to absorb another $105,000 in principal payments.

Baker said she's consulted with city auditor Jane Russell to make sure the city could afford an increase.

"They're assuring me we'll be fine," Baker said.

The new 2012 water and sewer refinancing bonds will also reduce the city's water parity rating from 1.3 to 1.25. A parity rating formula assures that the city receives 1.3 times the revenue for every $1 in expenses in order to cover its bond payments.

"The parity rating is set by the bond ordinance," city clerk Robbie Hume said in a follow-up interview, "because of the financial conditions, the bonding company allowed us to lower that parity rating in the new bond ordinance."

Last February, the city needed to increase water rates by 5.9 percent in order to cover the difference in the city's water and sewer parity rating. Last fiscal year's audit showed the city was at a 1.12 parity rating, as opposed to the required 1.3 set by the city's previous bond ordinance.

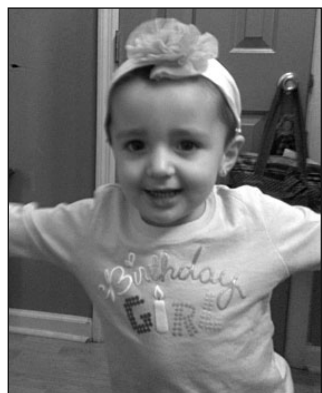

Council member Ken Evans expressed his concern that water rates were raised last year, and asked if that would be necessary if the city refinanced.

"It's already factored it in," council member Sandy Goodlett said. "We're actually lowering the parity, which is good."

The restructuring of the series 2012 bonds would include the $268,000 awarded to the city for the new water tank on Wild Turkey property and demolition of two Center Street water tanks.

The council also approved to amend its current fiscal year budget to reflect changes regarding the $166,000 awarded for the demolition of an unoccupied residence at 158 Joy St, and the construction of a storm water contention basin on the property, as well as the $1.35 million EDA grant awarded to the city for the construction of the new water tank.

MCKINNEY FAMILY OFFERS THANKS

Ryleigh McKinney, above, is doing great after beating Stage 4 liver cancer, and her family says they are very thankful the outpouring of prayers and support they received from the community. 'Our community came together with prayers, thoughts, kind words, support, food and money,' said family members Paul, Tonia and Raegan. 'You name it and everyone was ready to help. So many people have done something to help us get through this tough time so we could thank each and every one of you.' Ryleigh was 2 when she was diagnosed with cancer, and endured four rounds of chemotherapy, which began last May. Doctors feared she would need a liver transplant, but the chemotherapy worked well enough to shrink the tumors in her lungs and liver to limit surgery to a liver resection, family members said. 'She is doing awesome,' family members said. 'She is a very busy girl now, who loves to play dolls, dress up and she keeps right up with her big sister, Raegan.' Next up is a Make-A-Wish trip to Disney World in April.

Nothing common about 1 million baseball cards

Lawrenceburg man turns card-collecting hobby into busy charity 'Commons 4 Kids'

By Meaghan Downs
News staff

Jerry Milburn, a passionate Lawrenceburg baseball card collector, wanted to turn his hobby into something more.

His mission: collect 1 million baseball cards and donate them to less fortunate children across Kentucky.

It'd take at least a decade, Jerry said.

Or so he thought.

In only seven months since starting the Commons 4 Kids charity organization, however, Jerry will have donated more than a quarter million baseball cards to needy children and charities, with about 200,000 cards waiting to be given away.

What began as an effort to weed out his personal collection of "commons," or the more widely distributed and "common" baseball cards, has now morphed into almost full-time charity work.

"Before it was a hobby; but now it's like a full-time hobby, like a second job," Jerry, who works for the Kentucky Division of Water, said.

He and his wife Jackie now devote weeknights and weekends to sorting, packaging, picking up and dropping off thousands of cards to charities and shelters all over Kentucky.

After the Milburn family and Commons 4 Kids were profiled in Danville's Advocate Messenger newspaper, the Associated Press and USA Today picked up the story.

And with the new media exposure came more baseball cards.

Card donations started flooding in from all over the country, from a card shop in New Jersey to a Boston woman who ships 5,000 baseball cards almost every week. There's now even a satellite charity at work in Maryland.

"It went from my cards to 600,000 in a couple of months," Jerry said, who owns about 70,000-80,000 of his own baseball cards since he began collecting at the age of 4.

The response has been so overwhelming that at one point, Jackie said she was scared their van would not be able to hold the weight of 140,000 cards from a New Albany, Ind., donor.

"I was worried we were going to flatten the tires," Jackie said.

Recently, the Milburns expanded their travels out of state to St. Louis to donate 25,000 cards for the Ronald McDonald House and local charity Rainbows for Kids, which hosts birthday parties for children with cancer.

Commons 4 Kids organization has donated cards to the Boy Scouts, Big Brothers Big Sisters of Kentuckiana, women's shelters and the Sunrise Children's services in Danville, among others.

Recently Commons 4 Kids donated more than 42,000 cards to Nelson County's DARE graduation, which put them over the quarter million mark.

"If they have baseball cards, at least they have something," Jerry said of donating to families in need.

Of the cards Jerry purchases for his own personal card collection, he keeps 10 percent of what he buys, and donates the rest.

All donations Jerry receives — cards, baseball bats, minor league baseball tickets and even starting line-up figures — are given directly to charities.

And they're not all traditional baseball cards. The Jerry Milburn spends much of his free time meticulously sorting through baseball cards, stacking in them in rows and making sure there is an equal distribution of 'commons,' or less valuable baseball cards and the more valuable collectible cards he receives.

Milburns receive rugby, American Idol, Power Rangers, celebrity and Pokeman cards.

A "common" card might not universally common to everyone. For Jerry, a Cincinnati Reds fan, he'd much rather own a Reds baseball card than one featuring a Cardinals ballplayer.

Take New York Knicks point guard Jeremy Lin, for example.

"He was considered a 'common' player," Jerry said of Lin, whose cards are now valuable. "They couldn't give his cards away."

Jerry's personal favorite baseball card is his 1989 Upper Deck Ken Griffey Jr. rookie card.

Marred by two creases, it's not worth much to collectors.

But the Griffey Jr. card, Jerry said, is the one that "basically changed baseball card collecting forever."

It was also his mother's lucky charm at Bingo, and the baseball card that encapsulates Jerry's childhood joy of card collecting.

"It sums up my entire childhood. My entire childhood is in that card," he said.

It's the same kind of childhood memory and pastime he'd like to pass on to his five-year-old son Evan, as well as other children, those who might not have stable home lives, or enough pocket money to purchase a pack of cards.

"It kind of gives them a sense of being normal," Jerry said, "you know, just be kids for a while."

Once the millionth card is given out, Jerry said will donate a duplicate Ken Griffey, Jr. rookie card, one of three in his personal collection, to commemorate the milestone.

Jerry said he enjoys the task of sorting through the Jerry Milburn's most valuable card isn't the most expensive one he owns. It's the 1989 Upper Deck Ken Griffey, Jr. rookie card that his mother bought for him. 'It sums up my entire childhood,' Milburn, who started collecting baseball cards when he was about 4 or 5, said. 'My entire childhood is that card.'

cards, distributing each stack of 250 baseball cards with a mix of common cards and more valuable cards.

He makes sure to put them in clear plastic sandwich bags to make it easier for the charities to handle, and ensures that the donated cards are dustproof and waterproof.

"It's not as easy as taking cards and dropping them off at a charity," he said.

What's also a little more difficult is the paperwork: researching charities, calling charities, figuring out the finer details of the pick-up and the drop-off.

"There are charities I didn't even know existed," Jerry said.

Jerry blogs about each donation and charity on his website, www.common4kids.org.

The Milburns plan to give away about 165,000 baseball cards at Anderson County's opening Little League ceremony on April 14, as well as hand out baseball cards at Danville's Kids In Desperate Situations walk on April 7.

Jerry said he'd like to get involved with the Halloween Trunk or Treat on the Green next year, as well as annual Anderson County festivals such as the Fair and Horse Show and the Burgoo festival, with any organization that has the need for baseball cards.

"As long as I buy baseball cards, I'll be constantly giving them away," he said.

For more information about Jerry's organization, visit the website or contact him via e-mail at jerry@commons4kids.org.

Do you really know who Jesus was?

Who was Jesus Christ?

Recently, a local man told me how Jesus was less than God, according to his beliefs.

This pained me deeply because Christ is above all. Most professing Christians believe he was the son of God who died on the cross for our sins.

We know of his life story how he raised the dead, walked on water, healed the sick, and even forgave sin.

But did you know that he is actually God? Don't take my word for it, let's see what some of the scriptures tell us about the supremacy of Jesus.

Colossians 1:15-20, "The Son is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn over all creation. 16 For in him all things were created: things in heaven and on earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or powers or rulers or authorities; all things have been created through him and for him."

17: "He is before all things, and in him all things hold together."

18: "And he is the head of the body, the church; he is the beginning and the firstborn from among the dead, so that in everything he might have the supremacy."

19: "For God was pleased to have all his fullness dwell in him."

20: "and through him to reconcile to himself all things, whether things on earth or things in heaven, by making peace through his blood, shed on the cross."

Now jump to John 10:3, "But if I do his work, believe in the evidence of the miraculous works I have done, even if you don't believe me.

"Then you will know and understand that the Father is in me, and I am in the Father."

Romans 9:5: 5: "Theirs are the patriarchs, and from them is traced the human ancestry of the Christ, who is God over all, forever praised[^a] Amen."

Romans 2:16, "This will take place on the day when God will judge men's secrets through Jesus Christ, as my gospel declares.

Finally, 2 Corinthians 5:10, "For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, so that each of us may receive what is due us for the things done while in the body, whether good or bad."

So, we have Colossians telling us all things were created for him and by him (that being Christ). John tells us that Christ is in God and God in him. Romans bluntly declares Christ God overall. Finally, Corinthians declaring we will all stand before the judgment seat of Christ.

Now, based on these scriptures I encourage you to go back to your Bibles and read with more entirety, who is Christ to you? Is Christ the Lord of your life or a religion?

'IT WILL ALL WORK OUT IN THE END'

The above statement was made by a lady sitting behind me flying from North Carolina to Kentucky. She had been discussing rules and the Bible, and how people ought not to put too much emphasis on rules. After all she said it's all about the people, not rules.

Why do people hate rules? Why do they call individuals who keep rules 'legalist'? We all have to admit that we have to keep rules in many areas of our lives, but when it comes to religion we hate rules, even more. Why? Because the following of the rules of God would make us forsake our adulterous, lying, drinking, dancing and cheating ways – called works of the flesh in Galatians 5:19-21.

We love to talk about the loving, merciful, all-forgiving God, but do not want to think that He just might want us to do HIS WILL (rule keeping). "If you keep My commandments, you will abide in My love, just as I have kept My Father's commandments and abide in His love" (John 15:9). "The term command means: "To direct authoritatively; order." Without rules there would be confusion in religion; and that is exactly why there are so many different churches in the world. Many churches have been started because they didn't want to follow the rules (Matt. 15:7-9). Jesus said, "Every plant which My heavenly Father has not planted will be rooted up" (Matt. 15:13). Where you worship, are you following the rules?

Striving for improvement

No superstars, but track team working to be the best it can

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

Anderson County track and field might be an example of simply working hard and letting that take care of everything else.

And so far, things are working out well for a team that was expected to be rebuilding in nearly every area.

"My goal is for all of our competitors to be dedicated to improving. Not to set records, but to compete at the highest level they can," says new coach Adam Turner, who took over for Robert Meacham this year. "There isn't anything wrong with setting records, but I think being the best you can possibly be is important, and if a record is broken in the meantime, then that's great."

The Bearcats suffered heavy graduation losses with high jumper Ryan Ratliff probably being the highest-profile performer. Ratliff signed with the University of Kentucky and is jumping well for the Wildcats in the early going. Turner, though is optimistic that several talented newcomers

Mr. Wildcat would be enjoying the ride

Cats vs. Cards Final Four matchup comes exactly four years after equipment manager's death

I just wonder what Bill Keightley would be saying about all this Commonwealth Commotion.

Everyone knew Anderson County's most famous son. At least everyone who even remotely follows college basketball, and then some, that is.

Raised just south of Lawrenceburg and a graduate of Kavanaugh High School, "Big Smooth" as the players called him, served as hoops equipment manager 48 years. His tenure spanned those of coaches Rupp, Hall, Sutton, Pitino, Smith and Gillispie.

He was simply Mr. Wildcat.

During his annual trip to baseball's Opening Day in Cincinnati, Bill Keightley died unexpectedly on March 31, 2008.

Exactly one year later, John Calipari accepted UK's call to revive a once-proud dynasty that had become stagnant.

And now, after three more years, Kentucky basketball will be looking to return to the sport's biggest stage in the national semi-finals against the Louisville Cardinals.

Call it coincidence. Call it fate. Call it what you want.

Just admit that it's almost eerie.

Consider that when Rick Pitino left the New York Knicks to take reins of the Kentucky program in 1989, one of the first people he sought out was Big Smooth.

Pitino was the brash New Yorker wearing thousand-dollar suits. Keightley was the farm boy from Anderson County who still drove an old pickup truck around Lexington.

They hit it off immediately.

"They were so different," Keightley's daughter, Karen Marlowe said in a 2009 interview. "But they had the same work ethic. That is why there was a mutual respect."

Keightley loved to tell the story

Tennis teams winning with cooperative spirit

Doubles tandem leads boys, girls team to undefeated start

By John Herndon
Sports editor

There is a spirit of cooperation around the Anderson County tennis teams this spring.

Not only are the Bearcats and Lady Bearcats sharing the same practice courts, they are largely playing the same schedules and are, in fact, sharing coaches.

Jeremy Cook, who had been leading the Anderson boys' program since 2006, moves over to guide the Anderson girls' team with second-year coach T.J. Spivey serving as his assistant. Spivey, who teamed up with Aaron Hume to form a doubles team that won the school's only regional tennis title in 2005, now heads the boys' team with Cook as his assistant.

So far it is working out well.

The girls' team has gotten off to a rousing 4-0 start that includes a season-opening win over a good Collins team. No results on the boys' team's first week of play had been submitted to The Anderson News by press deadlines.

The biggest problem might be finding enough workspace for the teams as 26 girls and 11 boys have come out for the sport. Somehow, they work it out.

The Bearcat boys no longer have the services of Levi Cox, who graduated last spring. He had been a mainstay for the team since the eighth grade, but was last year's only senior.

"It is very difficult to replace a player who has been with you as long as Levi had been," Cook said, "but we have been very lucky to always have a steady flow of young players joining the team."

This year, seniors Lowell Gordon and Luke Warford are expected to continue their stellar play as one of the top boys' doubles' teams in the Eighth Region. Another senior, Ben McDonald, is also expected to play a key role for the Bearcats.

On the girls' side, four seniors - Allison Goodlett, Scarlett Sullivan, Allie Doyle and Hailey Cutts - are being counted upon to be strong for the Lady Bearcats. "I am not sure just how many players were lost from

Franklin County punishes porous Anderson defense

Bearcats yield eight unearned runs

By John Herndon
Sports Editor

If anyone needed a reminder that baseball can be a wacky game, he got it in Anderson County's third contest of the high school season.

Franklin County pounced on seven Bearcat errors along with several other mental gaffes to post an 11-4 win at Barnes Memorial Field last Wednesday. And this was over an Anderson team that has expected its pitching and defense to carry it to a spot among the contenders in the Eighth Region race.

The Flyers plated 10 runs - eight of them unearned - in the top of the third, chasing Anderson starting pitcher Steven Watts. Franklin collected eight hits in the inning, all of them singles, but Anderson aided the Flyers with five errors, as Franklin sent 14 batters to the plate.

"Got to give Franklin credit, because they saw weakness and pounced," Anderson coach L.W. Barnes said. "The disappointing thing is our mistakes came on things we work on multiple times a week - bunt defense, communication, relays, etc. I think their running game really got us flustered."

"Our pitchers didn't help our catcher at all. But it really just came down to not making routine plays and getting outs. I still trust our defense, and I expect them to continually get better."

Franklin stole seven bases and got on base three times with bunts that Anderson defended poorly.

Anderson's Watts was not exceptionally sharp but pitched far better than his line - eight runs in 2.1 innings - indicated.

"Steven didn't really throw anyway near how he is capable," Barnes said. "He still has to get more consistent with all his pitches. He wasn't happy with his performance at all and neither were we. He's got to get on top of the count more often. When he pitches ahead in

From staff reports

Anderson County resident Mary Ann Warford has been named the Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic Association softball Player of the Week for the week ending March 18.

Warford hit safely in three of four games and finished the week with a .583 batting average (7-for-12). Asbury finished the week with a 2-2 record after losing two games to Lindsey Wilson and picking up two wins against Brescia. The senior center fielder finished the week with a double, 5 stolen bases, and five runs scored. She is currently hitting .462 (18-for-39), according to a news release on the school's athletic website.

Warford is a senior at Asbury and is a daughter of Mark and Leann Warford of Lawrenceburg.

will perform well.

"We graduated a lot of seniors last year and have a lot of sophomores and freshmen this year," says Turner, who worked with the Anderson throwers the last two seasons. "Our younger group is going to be an important part of our success this year."

Part of that youth movement is eighth-grader Connor Duncan, who has turned in second place finishes in both the boys' 110- and 300-meter hurdle events in a large field at the West Jessamine All-Comers last Tuesday. Turner says the Bearcats are expecting big things out of Duncan.

Seventh-grader Allora Sims could be one of the top girls' sprinters, joining juniors Tiffany Yount and Adrian Willhite.

While Anderson might not have any superstars, several Bearcats could be very good and have a chance at making the state meet, to be held at the University of Louisville in late May.

Senior Travis Davis took first place in both the shot put and discus throw last week at West Jessamine.

"Having Travis win both the shot and disc events shows that he has worked really hard to get better. Travis is a great kid and will continue to improve.

"As long as he continues to get better, he has a chance at competing well at regionals this year."

Davis bested 42 feet in the shot put in his first meet at West Jessamine, then was just short of that mark in winning at Western Hills on Friday.

Another senior, Austin Sparks, is also expected to be strong in the throwing events.

Yount is expected to do well in the long jump topping 13 feet during both meets last week and taking first at West Jessamine. Turner says she "has a chance at competing (at a high level) this year in the long jump."

The Bearcats appear to be solid, especially on the boys' team, which took second place out of six teams that scored at West Jessamine. The Bearcats also took second, behind Western Hills but ahead of Woodford County in a much smaller meet at Western Hills.

Junior Ryan McGregor and sophomore T.J. Lewis both should be strong in the sprints while senior Austin Dillow and junior Forrest Coffey are expected to make a run at the state in the distance events.

Dillow signed a letter-of-intent with Kentucky State University last week. "We are expecting good things out of him this season," Turner says. "He has shown great leadership in practice and has a very good chance of making it to the state this year."

Dillow ran the 400- and 800-meter races at West Jessamine while Coffey was one of several that competed in the 1600- and 3200-meter distances. Junior Jonas Conrad, a newcomer to the team, did well at West Jessamine, finishing eighth in the 400-meters, just ahead of Dillow. Casey Moninger placed fifth in that event and won it at Western Hills.

Sophomore John Satterly, another first-time runner, is expected to be strong in the sprints as well.

Boyle takes advantage of one bad Lady Bearcat inning

From staff reports

Anderson County had the bases loaded with one out in the seventh inning when Boyle County's Lindsey Edwards turned in an unassisted double play to end Wednesday's game at Anderson. Edwards snared a line drive, then tagged third base to complete the twin-killing and drop the Lady Bearcats to 1-2 on the year. Boyle had scored four runs in the third inning to take the lead after the Lady Bearcats had scored an unearned run in the first inning. "We had more hits, were 5-for-5 in stolen bases and lost because of one inning," said Anderson coach Brian Glass. "We have to learn to concentrate all seven innings." Glass said Boyle is a strong offensive team and hit the ball hard in the third. He still found some good things about his team. "Our baserunning looked good, with Anna-Marie (Hyatt), Molly (Burkhead),

GIRLS' SOFTBALL

Lexan Overby, Marissa Walker and Kaci Currens using their speed. We were in the perfect position to win the game and it just didn't happen. "These kids will step up. I believe in these kids' abilities," Glass said.

Searcy pounds West Jessamine

Hannah Searcy belted a home run and drove in five as Anderson County routed West

Jessamine 11-1 in a game called by the "mercy rule" after five innings last Thursday. Searcy, a junior, had hits in both of her at-bats. Anna-Marie Hyatt ripped three hits and drove in two while Madison Brummett, Bailey Curry and Molly Burkhead all had two hits each. Anderson pounded West Jessamine pitching for 13 hits with Curry and Kelsey New smacking doubles. Anderson stole six bases with Burkhead swiping two.

Mackenzie Peavler picked up the win, giving up four hits and striking out five. She did not walk a batter.

Presentation, South Oldham games canceled

Friday night's rains forced cancellation of Saturday's three-team double-header at Anderson. The Lady Bearcats were to have played Louisville Presentation and South Oldham with the two visiting teams playing a game in between.

from last year's girls' team but I know there were a couple either through graduation or other commitments that are not back this year," says Cook, who took over the girls' program when Catina Sims elected to give up coaching tennis. "But I have several young women who are back from last year's team that we believe will hold their own against anybody in the region."

Over the years, the Anderson tennis team has always operated at a bit of a disadvantage as there are only four courts - those located on the school's campus - available to use in the county. While there have been some successes, most notably the Spivey-Hume duo and Kristen Hamrick, who qualified for the state as a singles player in 2010, the goal has often been to teach the game as a lifetime sport, but always pointing to regional and, if possible, experience regional success.

That is despite being in a region with long-time powers Franklin County along with Oldham County, South Oldham and North Oldham.

"We always set a goal of reaching the state with every one of our teams," Cook says. "We believe this year is no different from the past few. We have a good chance of doing something great in both girls' and boys' tennis. Both teams have key players back that spent a lot of time in the off-season working on their games. Both teams have seniors in key spots along with some young talent that will be around for awhile. "It is hard to nail down a true starting lineup this early in the season, but we have a problem that most coaches would love to have. We have a lot of players who can play in a lot of different spots."

With that in mind,

Anderson can expect to have many different looks before the regional tournaments begin in May.

Both teams got pleasant surprises with exchange students who should be among Anderson's top players. Leza Kolesnikova has been Anderson's No. 1 singles player in several early matches.

On the boys' side, exchange student T.J. Pham is also solid.

However, three seniors, McDonald and the doubles tandem of Warford and Gordon, are expected to anchor the team. Junior Joe Koontz and sophomore Ben Spear were solid a year ago and are expected to play well for the Bearcats.

"We are returning five starters who all played in region, so they will definately be used to the pressures of the game," Spivey says. "The underclassmen have made tremendous amounts of improvement over the summer.

"We also have some very promising freshmen who came out this year. All the boys have worked so hard to be where they are today."

Gordon and Warford were very successful in varsity play a year ago, advancing deep into the regional tournament, then continued their success in the off-season leagues. "They will be playing as a duo again this year," Spivey says. "I feel that if they continue to work hard and practice on their communication on the court, they can cause a lot of stink in

Teams play many double headers, face long layoff

The Anderson County tennis teams might be true road warriors this year, but Cook says that is a combination of several factors.

The Anderson girls played Shelby County last Thursday and will not return to the court until April 10. The boys' team plays at Gallatin County today, March 28, but will be off until April 11. "The long break is just due to the fact that our spring break (April 2-6) does not line up with anyone else in the region," says girls' tennis coach Jeremy Cook, who is also Anderson's assistant athletics director.

Cook says some practical concerns have prompted a large number of away matches. "We are trying to play a lot of double-headers since T.J. and myself are both coaching the teams. We really don't have the courts for double-headers and schools like Franklin County, Western Hills and the Oldham County schools have six or more courts and we can play the matches faster. Plus, our courts are a soft surface and the region and state are played on a hard surface, so we want to play as many games as possible on hard courts.

"Then you have schools like Gallatin County, who for years had away games and now they have courts, so it is only fair that we go there for awhile to play."

the regional tournament."

The Anderson boys will be looking to also compete in one of the state's stronger regions apart from the major metro areas. The Oldham County schools and Franklin County schools will see to that. Yet, Spivey is optimistic.

He has experienced players and some talented newcomers.

"They all show a lot of promise," he says.

But with the season starting earlier than ever this year, things have been looking good so far.

"It felt weird starting so early," he said. "I believe we had snow days this time last year, but (the team) looked very good to be so early and have little practice time."

about the day Pitino needed a ride to Lexington's Blue Grass Field for a flight back to New York. Mr. Wildcat gladly obliged.

"We were bouncing around New Circle Road and Rick said, 'I wish Joanne (Pitino's wife) could see me now. She says I always have to ride to the airport in a limousine,'" Keightley recalled in a 1996 interview. He broke out in a boisterous laugh.

"I said, 'Coach, you are in Kentucky now. This IS a limousine.'"

And now, of course, Pitino is coaching the Cardinals.

He's made some barbs at UK over the years, this week predicting that some Wildcat fans might jump off one of Louisville's bridges if the Cardinals pull the upset.

But he would never disparage the memory of Mr. Wildcat. In fact, the Cardinal coach spoke at Mr. Wildcat's funeral in Rupp Arena.

"On the night of the funeral, we were the last ones out," Karen Marlowe said in 2009. "I told Rick that I was glad he was there. I know he loved Dad very much."

A year and a day after Bill Keightley passed away, John Calipari had his first press conference as Wildcat head coach. The first thing he asked was if Bill Keightley's family was there.

It was before he mentioned Joe B. Hall. Before he talked about mimicking Kyle Macy's free throw form. Before he talked about Jack Givens or Tayshaun Prince.

And right away the Big Blue Nation knew Calipari was the man for the job.

Cal talked about Mr. Wildcat always having a smile and an encouraging word.

Big Smooth would have loved what John Calipari has done in Lexington. The Wildcats play fast. They play hard. And they win big.

I have no doubt Mr. Wildcat would have been relishing a second straight trip to the Final Four, something that happened only during the glory years of 1996-97-98 during his tenure. He would be wanting to put it on the Cardinals and then win it all Monday night.

Those who say it is only a game really don't understand what Kentuckians are made of.

At the same time, I believe Mr. Wildcat would treat his opponent with respect.

Sure it would gnaw at him when the Wildcats lost. It was probably because it happened so rarely. But Mr. Wildcat treated all with courtesy.

And four years after Mr. Wildcat left us, he would be beaming again as the Wildcats end Louisville's run, 71-65, then move on to win it all over Kansas on Monday night.

the count, he is so much better, but it seemed he battled down in the count the entire three innings he pitched."

Franklin had gotten on the board in the top of the first when Nick Compton singled, then stole second and came home on Eric Meyer's 2-out single.

Anderson responded in its half of the first when Landon Case belted a home run well over the left-field fence, then scored twice more when Granville Hayes drove home Cole Sayre and Brandon Eliadis, both of whom had walked, with a two-out hit.

Watts seemed to be humming along until the third, when everything went haywire. Franklin's first five batters reached base and the explosion was on.

Eliadis came on in relief of Watts with one out in the third, throwing 3.2 innings of shutout ball, although he did yield six hits.

"Brandon did a very good job, and with a little more experience he will be a big contributor. I was proud of his effort," Barnes said.

Zach Mason came on to pitch the seventh for Anderson.

Brandon Smither, who came on it relief of Nick Redmon after the third inning uprising, got the win. Franklin improved to 2-1 on the season while Watts took the loss.

"We have got to get better offensively, our pitching has been good enough, but offensively we are still struggling," Barnes said. "I still trust our defense, but we have a long way to go if we intend on competing for another district and regional title."

BASEBALL ROUNDUP

Boyle Co. 8, Anderson Co. 3

Boyle County erupted for six runs in the last three innings to spoil Anderson County's home opener with an 8-3 win last Tuesday at Barnes Memorial Field. Anderson managed just six hits off Boyle pitching. Cole Sayre and Shea Sparrow both smacked doubles to lead the Anderson offense.

Anderson Co. 5, Mercer Co. 3

Anderson County got just three hits but took advantage of three Mercer County errors to post a 5-3 win over the defending state runner-up in Last Monday's opener. The Bearcats plated four unearned runs in the first three innings, then got some insurance in the seventh when Granville Hayes drove in Clay Guffey with two out.

A three-team doubleheader involving Anderson County, Green County and host John Hardin on Saturday was canceled.

Set up on field edges when turkey season arrives next month

Too early. I know it feels great outside the last several weeks but spring is here at least two to three weeks too early thanks to not much winter and a whole lot of rain. Grass and weeds are shooting up around my place nearly as fast as the gas prices.

I say “too early” because of all the tree buds that are coming out and could fall prey to a still possible freeze or at least sustain damage from a really hard frost. Flowers and most landscaping can be covered up and protected to a point but not those 75 and 100 feet red and white oaks that produce the bulk of our wildlife’s mast crops for food each year. Let’s just pray that the temperatures stay at least above the 32-degree mark until next fall’s deer season.

The warm weather has gotten us on the water already for a little fishing. Dad and I took his bass boat to Taylorsville for a test run a couple weeks ago. After some tinkering and pecking on the carburetors to free up the float valves the old blue bomb ran like a charm.

Due to the muddy and trashy water we ventured up the lake to try and find a little clearer water but didn’t have much luck. Although the lake is still several feet low and still at its winter pool we didn’t manage to find ideal fishing waters to try the crappie. We were only able to fish an hour or two, drown a dozen minnows and actually caught and boated a rock.

Yes, a rock off the bottom of Taylorsville Lake is my only “catch” of the year so far. It’s the first and only rock I have actually hooked, reeled in and laid in the bottom of the boat and never touched.

I landed the rock into the bottom of the boat and it actually just came unhooked and laid there so I brought it home and made it a part of my landscaping. It obviously didn’t want to be under water any longer so I rewarded it with a trip to higher ground.

Guess we all should take the higher road in life to higher ground when we get the opportunity. Although we only caught a rock and felt kind of like Charlie Brown at Halloween, I really enjoyed the time on the water with Dad in his old boat.

Now that he’s finally retired hopefully we can spend a lot more time on the water and in the woods enjoying God’s creations.

Spring turkey season

Kentucky’s spring turkey season is almost here again. The youth only turkey season is scheduled for April 7-8 so get outside and pattern that shotgun and get the kid’s gear together and take them hunting.

The statewide spring turkey season opens Saturday, April 14 and runs through May 6.

The birds are already gobbling and strutting around my place so I’m hoping for a great season.

The early greening up of the understory may make for some tough bird hunting in most of Kentucky’s woods, but field edges where birds can strut and chase bugs should work well for setups.

Always check the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife Resources rules and regulations before going afield. Also, March 1 was the beginning of a new license year in Kentucky so be sure you have purchased new hunting and fishing licenses as well as required permits before hitting the woods and waters of our great state.

Right to carry issues at the forefront

I would be very interested to see what local readers here in Anderson County have to say about this with it being a hot button issue right now.

It’s all over the news as a result of a Florida incident back in February. I won’t go into the details as most of you have heard about the event on the news of the teenage boy that was shot by the leader of a neighborhood watch program.

It seems to be growing by the minute and the federal government has even gotten involved as of this writing. Heaven help us all. Send your opinions and thoughts to news@theandersonnews.com and let’s see what Anderson County is thinking.

Bobby Ware (a cat in a hat?)

Bob and Pam Ware’s son, Bobby, is at it again. I recently received a picture of Bobby holding a mountain lion he snared while actually trapping wolves near his home in northern Idaho.

The cougar, as it is more commonly called, appears to be quite an arm full for the not so small trapper. The female cougar weighed in at 105 pounds.

His dog appears to be taking quite an interest in it also in the picture.

I know it’s cold in northern Idaho because I’ve never seen a picture of Bobby without his trusty toboggan hat. According to Bob, Bobby plans to tan the hide, head and paws and make a nice rug.

Congratulations to him on a nice trophy for the cabin.

Quick shots

Don’t forget to donate your $10 for next fall’s elk hunt. I have for another year and still hope to one day get drawn.

Check with Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife and get those kids into a Hunter Education Course before it’s too late. Youth turkey season is almost here, you know.

Take a kid huntin’ or fishin’ soon.

See ya outside.

Old River Road opens just in time for white bass run at Taylorsville Lake

From staff reports

Anglers have new access to the Taylorsville Lake headwaters in central Kentucky just in time for the popular white bass spawning run, according to a release from the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife resources.

“We’re going to be putting a lot of smiles on the faces of people,” said Bill Mitchell, foreman of the Taylorsville Lake Wildlife Management Area.

The management area includes an old road which normally is only open during quota deer hunts. The department’s wildlife and fisheries divisions have worked together over the winter to improve the road and install the necessary culvert to make the road accessible to anglers.

The seasonal reopening of Old River Road now provides anglers with easy access to some two miles of the Salt River. Mitchell said the improvements include new gravel on the roadway to make the area suitable for car traffic, construction of two gravel parking lots with space for 10-15 vehicles and several one car pull-offs placed along the road.

Old River Road opened for public use March 15. It will remain open until April 13, when the access gate will close until the fall. The road is accessible only off Palmer Road in Anderson County. Old River Road is gated at its eastern and western ends. Palmer Road connects to KY 1579, which ends at the Van Buren Boat Ramp at Taylorsville Lake.

Mitchell said the Palmer Road gate will open at 7:30 a.m. each morning and remain open until dark. The gate will also remain open during the April 7-8 youth turkey season. “We think this will make it easier for young hunters to get into some of these areas,” Mitchell said.

Plans call for the road access to open each year from March 15 until the day before Kentucky’s statewide spring turkey season. This will allow anglers to access the river during the height of the white bass spawning run up the river.

Maps of Taylorsville WMA and other wildlife management areas are available online at fw.ky.gov, the website of Kentucky Fish and Wildlife.

LEGAL NOTICES

MASTER COMMISSIONER'S SALE

In order to comply with the orders of the Anderson Circuit Court, the Master Commissioner will sell the property described in the following actions on Thursday, March 29, 2012, at 11:00 a.m. in the Anderson County Courthouse, Lawrenceburg, Kentucky. The property shall be sold to raise the amounts herein-after set forth, together with interest and the costs of this action, and upon the following terms and conditions (unless otherwise indicated):

(1) At the time of the sale, the successful bidder shall either pay cash or make a deposit of ten percent (10%) of the purchase price, with the balance on credit for thirty (30) days. In the event the successful bidder elects to credit the balance, he or she will be required to post bond and furnish surety acceptable to the Master Commissioner. The bond shall be for the unpaid purchase price and bear interest and the rate of twelve percent (12%) per annum until paid in full.

(2) PLEASE NOTE: The real estate SHALL BE SOLD SUBJECT TO ALL city, state, county, and school real estate taxes, whether current or delinquent.

(3) Where the real estate has insurable improvements, the successful bidder shall, at his or her own expense, carry fire and extended coverage insurance on said improvements from the date of sale until the purchase price is fully paid, to the extent of the Court appraised value of said improvements or the unpaid balance of the purchase price, whichever is less, at a minimum, with a loss clause payable to the Master Commissioner or the appropriate Plaintiff. Failure of the successful bidder to effect such insurance shall not affect the validity of the sale or the successful bidder's liability thereunder, but shall entitle, but not require, the Plaintiff(s) to effect said insurance and furnish the policy or evidence thereof to the Master Commissioner, if it so desires, and the premium thereon or the property portion thereof shall be charged to the successful bidder as the successful bidder's cost.

(4) The property shall otherwise be sold free and clear of any right, title and interest of all parties to the action and of their liens and encumbrances thereon excepting easements and restrictions of record in the Anderson County Clerk's Office, and such right of redemption which may exist in favor of the United States of America or the Defendant(s), and any matters disclosed by an accurate survey and inspection of the property.
